Project Supervisor for the Design Process (PSDP)

The role of the Project Supervisor for Design Process, is to coordinate every element of Health and Safety in design associated with construction projects.

In order to fulfil this role those appointed as PSDP must do the following,

- Demonstrate their competence to undertake the role of PSDP for the project being undertaken,
- Demonstrate how the general principles of prevention have been taken into account when preparing the design,
- Identify particular risks and make these known to the Project Supervisor for the Construction Stage or inform the Client,
- Prepare the preliminary Safety and Health Plan,
- Co-ordinate the activities of all designers and issue instructions to designers as necessary,
- Ensure that any changes to design which may occur at construction stage are appropriately assessed,
- Prepare the safety file and deliver this to the client,

Egan Safety Solutions offers its clients it considerable experience in fulfilling the above duties. Our experienced and competent safety consultants can assist our clients in meeting their requirements in the following ways.

- Acting as Project Supervisor for the Design Process,
- Assisting appointed PSDP's to develop required documentation such as the preliminary Health and Safety plan and the Safety File,
- By auditing the PSDP's safety management system and making any recommendations necessary for improvement,
- Auditing of all construction related documentation to ensure that any hazards which were identified during the design stage are being effectively managed during the construction stage,
- Acting as Health and Safety Coordinator on behalf of the PSDP,
- Monitoring the progress of construction and overseeing the compilation of material for inclusion in the Safety file,
