Accident Investigation and Reporting

Where accidents or incidents occur at the place of work, it is often an indication that additional measures or resources may be required to ensure that further similar accidents are prevented. In some cases, it may be that all that was reasonably, practicable had been carried out, and the provision of further resources would not have prevented the accident from occurring.

The purpose of Accident Investigation is to ensure that all the circumstances and conditions that surrounded the event are established and examined to identify what significance if any can be attributed to them in terms of the accident, which occurred. The goal is to establish what the root or primary cause of the accident was and to ensure that this is adequately addressed.

Egan Safety Solutions offers its client an Accident Investigation service.
